

How stories came to be Brooklynie

have you ever wondered about the stories that people would pass down to their children and what the people were like back then I will tell some things I know about them. In the stories they pass down they all tell things about them there used to be a story teller which kids were just little like 5 at least some of them the story teller would tell stories and the children would learn what happened back then. Then they would tell their kids when they're older. I learned they probably thought the foxes around there were not trustworthy to have at home there and thought they were sly or mean.
